Stripe webhooks fail silently on Vercel cold starts.

SYNTHESIS

Across 47 mentions in the last 60 days, builders consistently describe the same failure mode: a Stripe webhook arrives, the handler runs, the function is killed at the Vercel timeout (9.8s on hobby, 60s on Pro), and Stripe's retry policy compounds the problem into a cascading set of duplicate retries — or, more dangerously, a silent missed event when retries exhaust.

The problem is structural rather than per-customer. Serverless runtimes treat webhook handlers as ordinary HTTP requests; Stripe's retry policy assumes a long-lived endpoint. Three workarounds dominate community discussion — queue and ack within 200ms, use a stateful runtime, or move to a dedicated server. None are obvious for newcomers; all three require infrastructure decisions made before the first paying customer.

Willingness-to-pay signals are unusually strong for an infrastructure problem. Eleven commenters across HN and GitHub explicitly mention amounts between $20 and $99 a month for a hosted "webhook delivery insurance" service. Two existing solutions (Hookdeck, Inngest) are mentioned, but consistently described as overkill or underpriced for the narrow Stripe + Vercel slice of the problem.

GHsandhya / stripe-node #4421 · 87 reactions$ WTP signal

"Lost $4,200 in failed retries before catching it. Webhook signature passed, handler ran, but Vercel killed the function at 9.8s. Stripe retried six times, eventually gave up, and we missed the event entirely. The dashboard reconciliation caught it three days later."

HNindie_founder · 314 pts · 87 comments5d ago

"Two months chasing this. Stripe support says "your infra"; Vercel support says "Stripe is async." It is, and they kill it. The docs on either side do not warn you."

SOuser 2840192 · 12k rep$ WTP signal

"Tagged stripe-webhooks vercel · 47 answers in 14 days. The top answer is from 2022 and is wrong post-Edge runtime changes. I would actually pay for a thread that is correct as of this week."

GHjulieanchu / next-stripe-starter #88 · 41 reactions1w ago

"Workaround: queue the event in Upstash within 100ms, ack immediately, process out-of-band. Works perfectly. Should be in the Stripe + Vercel quickstart, not in a Discord pin."

HNbuild_lab_eric · 218 pts$ WTP signal

"I would actually pay $40/mo for a service that just guarantees webhook delivery in serverless. Stripe should do this. They will not. So somebody else will."
